

FACES OF "OPERATION FREEDOM"

New Mexicans are making a difference and are already taking the challenges and messages from "Operation Freedom" and building a better New Mexico by improving local communities.

RPNM would like to share "Faces Of Operation Freedom"-- interviews that show how New Mexicans from all walks of life are making a positive change here in our state.

These videos introduce passionate, hardworking New Mexicans who are inspired to revitalize and rebuild the Land of Enchantment. They have been working and applying the themes of "Operation Freedom" in their counties. These people are active, creative and are awakening New Mexico communities by their work. They believe in our state and that we can make "positive change" for our communities and our families.

FOCUS ON YOUTH

Olivia Bova is from Hobbs and is learning how to be involved in the legislative process through Teenpact. Olivia is an example of what conservative young people are up to in

New Mexico. At 16 she became a national instructor in government processes, traveling almost 100 days last year teaching, encouraging and mentoring. All of our young people could make this sort of great contribution if we just asked them to be involved. Olivia is among those young people who are inspired to work for change and make New Mexico a better place.

Jennifer Mock is the Executive Director of Estancia Valley Classical Academy. That charter school is able to put children first and instill character and values in the classroom.

The Estancia Boys--these three students have a passion for America and learning about our Constitution.

CALL TO ACTION!

Get involved and help make New Mexico a better place to live.

Average, everyday citizens are making a difference, and RPNM is encouraging others around New Mexico to take a stand and help rebuild New Mexico at the grassroots level, employing conservative values and making New Mexico a better place in which to live and raise a family.

To join the effort, please email RPNM Executive Director Kim Skaggs at Kim@gopnm.org or call 505-298-3662.
