Mark Ronchetti Calls Out New Mexico Politicians Leveling Extreme and Radical Attacks on Law Enforcement

Ronchetti Posted Response Video on All Social Media Accounts

Albuquerque, NM – Today, Republican U.S. Senate nominee Mark Ronchetti responded to New Mexico politicians who are demonizing law enforcement and attempting to distract New Mexicans from the extreme crime crisis within Albuquerque by calling for the resignation of Bernalillo County Sheriff Manny Gonzales for fighting crime.

Mark Ronchetti highlights in the video New Mexico representatives, at the federal and local levels, who are referring to law enforcement as “stormtroopers” and “secret police.”

“When a D.C. politician representing New Mexico refers to police officers as ‘stormtroopers’, a term used to refer to Nazi soldiers, that’s when we know they’ve lost all perspective and sound judgment,” said Mark Ronchetti. “Our political environment can’t be so poisonous that it blinds us to what bonds us all together...the desire for safe streets to raise our families.”

The Ronchetti campaign also highlighted the extreme and radical nature of the comments by far-left Democrats against a member of their own party.

“When Bernalillo County Sheriff Manny Gonzales – who is an elected Democrat – is being asked to resign by fellow Democrats for wanting to solve crime problems, it is crystal clear we have extreme, far-left, and radical leadership,” said Ronchetti’s Campaign Manager Jeff Glassburner.

“The Sheriff isn’t asking for help to stop protestors – he’s asking for help to fight everyday violent crime in our community. Mark will fight for federal help for local communities in our state because our local leadership has put politics above people and passed on their responsibility.”

The video is posted to all of the campaign’s social media accounts.
