Gov. Lujan Grisham secures extension of federal disaster declaration

Governor also requests federal financial support for ranchers, farmers, and landowners impacted by wildfires

SANTA FE – Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham announced on Monday that the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has granted her request to extend the duration of New Mexico’s disaster declaration as monsoon season floods continue to impact New Mexicans in wildfire burn scar areas.

The extension comes after Gov. Lujan Grisham directly requested that President Joe Biden direct FEMA to extend the duration of the state’s disaster declaration, reiterating a request initially made by the state Department of Homeland Security and Emergency Management in early July. The Presidential Disaster Declaration for New Mexico counties affected by wildfires was originally granted in May for a duration of 90 days – the state requested an extension due to the continued expending of resources to fight fire, mitigate flood impacts in post-fire debris flows, and maintain response capability during the ongoing wildfire and monsoon seasons. The disaster declaration will now be in effect through September 6, 2022.

The governor has also requested that FEMA continue to cover 100% of the total eligible costs under the now-extended duration of the disaster declaration – that request is outstanding. New Mexicans impacted by wildfires or flooding, mudflow, and debris flow damage in burn scar areas can apply for assistance through September 6, 2022 by registering with FEMA at www.DisasterAssistance.gov or by calling 1-800-621-FEMA(3362).

Gov. Lujan Grisham has also requested that the U.S. Department of Agriculture provide funds to New Mexico ranchers, farmers, and landowners impacted by wildfires, including those fires caused by federal planned burns.

In a direct letter to USDA Secretary Tom Vilsack, Gov. Lujan Grisham requested that the federal department provide funds to New Mexico producers and landowners to purchase feed and complete infrastructure repairs, noting that the areas impacted by the federally-caused Hermit’s Peak and Calf Canyon fires include over 341,000 acres home to over 6,000 head of livestock and thousands of acres of managed forest land used for grazing.

“While USDA has disaster programs available, these programs are taking far too long to access and will not cover 100 percent of producer and landowner losses,” the governor writes. “These producers and landowners cannot and should not be required to fill gaps in federal support with loan programs and pay interest on loans they did not require until the federally-caused fire.”

Gov. Lujan Grisham continues: “It is critical that USDA fulfill the commitments made to our communities, including our farmers and ranchers, to cover one hundred percent of the costs to make these producers and landowners whole. This may include providing resources for several years as the burn scars in impacted areas are rehabilitated.”

The governor’s request to the USDA is the latest aspect of her continued efforts to secure federal relief and support for New Mexicans in the wake of the two largest fires in New Mexico history. Last week the governor secured both the addition of flooding impacts to the state’s federal disaster declaration as well as the launch of additional housing assistance for New Mexicans affected by wildfires. In addition to seeking 100% federal cost coverage for the extended period, the state has remaining outstanding requests to the federal government regarding adding Los Alamos and Sandoval counties to the state’s disaster declaration, as well as the retroactive extension of the use of Non-Congregate Sheltering and expediting the removal of debris and hazardous waste.

The governor’s letter to Sec. Vilsack is attached.

Secretary Thomas J. Vilsack
U.S. Department of Agriculture
1400 Independence Ave., S.W.
Washington, DC 20250

Dear Secretary Vilsack,

I have appreciated the discussions that we have had concerning the historic wildfires New Mexico experienced in late spring and early summer of this year. As I have relayed on a number of occasions, these fires have devastated communities that have been here for generations, and the lives of thousands of New Mexicans have been upended and forever changed. I also appreciate that your department, through the Forest Service, investigated both the Calf Canyon and Hermits Peak fires and took responsibility for igniting the prescribed burns that ultimately became these wildfires. However, significant work remains to ensure that the federal government and the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) provide New Mexicans with the timely and comprehensive support they deserve to recover from these devastating wildfires.

The area impacted by the federally-caused fires includes over 341,000 acres, and was home to over 6,000 head of livestock and thousands of acres of managed forest land. The land ownership base in that area includes private, state and federal land. Impacted producers and landowners are now left with few alternatives to continue their livelihoods. These lands were their summer grazing pastures and in many cases also their winter grazing ranges, and while USDA has disaster programs available, these programs are taking far too long to access and will not cover 100 percent of producer and landowner losses. These producers and landowners cannot and should not be required to fill gaps in federal support with loan programs and pay interest on loans they did not require until the federally-caused fire.

I am writing to request that you make our producers whole by providing funds so that they can immediately buy the feed necessary to meet urgent needs, obtain replacement pasture, and begin urgent repairs to infrastructure like fencing that was damaged by the fires. Further, forest landowners need funds to repair fences and roads, stabilize soils, and replant burned forests. It is critical that USDA fulfill the commitments made to our communities, including our farmers and ranchers, to cover one hundred percent of the costs to make these producers and landowners whole. This may include providing resources for several years as the burn scars in impacted areas are rehabilitated.

Calf Canyon/Hermits Peak was the largest fire in our state's history but sadly not the only fire our communities endured this year. In total, more than 800,000 acres have burned so far this year, including 325,000 acres burned by the Black Fire, the second largest fire in New Mexico history. Producers and landowners in impacted areas across the state are facing similar impacts, including displaced livestock and damaged infrastructure. Repairs of this magnitude are costly, and producers and landowners statewide are counting on USDA programs to meet those needs and allow them to rebuild and maintain their livelihoods.

Time is of the essence, as we risk losing communities that have been a part of New Mexico since long before statehood. I thank you for your consideration and stand ready to work with you to ensure that the New Mexicans impacted by these devastating wildfires get the support they deserve.

Sincerely,
