Governor to travel to Washington, D.C., for National Governors Association meeting

Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham is traveling to Washington, D.C., on Tuesday to attend the National Governors Association 2023 Winter Meeting.

The governor will attend multiple meetings with fellow governors, including a business session at the White House with the President, Vice President, and other members of administration leadership, along with a Western Governors Association meeting with several federal cabinet secretaries. At noon ET on Thursday, she will participate in a press conference alongside other governors from the Democratic Governors Association. At 10 a.m. ET, Gov. Lujan Grisham will join a plenary session on youth mental health hosted by NGA Chair New Jersey Gov. Phil Murphy and U.S. Surgeon General Vivek Murthy. The winter meeting will conclude with a reception at the White House hosted by the President and First Lady.

The governor will return to New Mexico on Sunday.
